“Divorce is rarely easy, yet navigating those rough waters can be easier with sufficient knowledge, preparation and support,” explains Trey Yates, a Houston based, board-certified family law attorney and founder of the program.

“Our seminars provide women with vital information they need to make informed decisions about divorce and the divorce process,” says Yates. “The program also addresses the transformative potential of this opportunity as a time of self-discovery and personal growth. Our seminars offer expert advice and tips on divorce financial planning, life skills, as well as physical and spiritual wellness.”

The half-day Guide to Good Divorce seminars include sessions led by Yates on the law of divorce in Texas, as well as a certified divorce financial planner, a life skills coach and other experts in the area of lifestyle and wellness. The seminars also include fun activities such as makeovers, fashion tips and more.

“We introduced our seminars in 2012 and have had great success reaching many who find themselves this cross-road. I have witnessed many draw strength, comfort and encouragement from our seminars and each other as they transition out of a marriage and into a new phase of their lives.”

Yates has practiced family law in the greater Houston Metropolitan Area since 1986. His idea for the seminars evolved over several years as he realized many of his female clients going through divorce could benefit from additional assistance beyond legal services.
